1. The North Korean Labor Party has a dual propaganda theme for immediate use.
 The first theme is as follows:

- a. The peaceful unification of Korea was and is the primary objective of the North Korean government, and that government will never agree to a peace that does not call for the unification of Korea.
- b. The United States and the puppet Syngman RHEE waged war against North Korea and brought death and destruction to Korea.
- c. The Koreans have shown that they will fight to the end against America and RHEE.
- d. The Americans are begging for peace, since they realize the futility of their Korean venture.

2. The second theme includes these points:

- a. If both the South and North Koreans want peace, the North Korean government will not ignore their plea.
- b. The differences between South and North Korea must be settled without the interference of any foreign power, and after the peace treaty is signed, all foreign troops must withdraw.
- c. After the truce a joint political committee must be established to assume the responsibility and function of political and military negotiations. The committee is to be formed by representatives of the people of all parts of Korea. The election of these representatives is to be direct and by secret ballot. Before such election, all political prisoners must be released, and a genuine free atmosphere be created by the authorities in both zones. The political committee will recommend a method for attaining a unified Korea to the authorities of both North and South Korea.
- d. The Democratic Front for Unification of Korea, which comprises about 700 representatives from areas all over Korea, must assume responsibility for supervising the election and must pass on members of the joint political
